The Supreme Court of Illinois held, in the case of Bolander vs. Peterson, that a generic name, or one merely descriptive of the article made or sold, or its qualities, ingredients or characteristics, and which may be employed truthfully by other makers or dealers is not entitled to protection as a trade mark, and that words designating a trade indicating that a particular class of goods is dealt in cannot be exclusively appropriated by one as a trade mark or a name. In this case it was held that the words "Swedish snuff store," or "magazine," could not be protected.

The chief inspector of workshops and factories of Ohio has issued orders to fifteen cigar manufacturers of Cincinnati to discharge all the children in their employ under the age of 16. This order is based on a law of Ohio, passed last winter, prohibiting the employment of children under 16 years of age at occupations injurious to health. Mr. McDonald, the inspector, says that he has certificates from several prominent physicians that the tobacco manufacturing industry is injurious to the health of the young employes, and hence orders the children discharged. The order will affect some 150 children.

Mr. Washington Ives, chairman of the English committee of the Jamaica exhibition, writes to the Pall Mall Gazette that he never expected the enterprise would be a financial success, but in other respects it is likely to be of lasting benefit to the island. It has improved trade, strengthened the revenue, brought visitors from Canada, the United States and Europe, and has aroused an interest in the islanders. So happy have been the results of this bringing together of the produce of Jamaica, in calling attention to its people and creating new industries, that the governor, Sir Henry A. Blake, suggests that an exhibition of a permanent character be established. Undoubtedly, concludes Mr. Ives, the undertaking, so successfully carried out, has been the most important event in the history of the island.

The beneficial effects of legislation recently enacted by Congress, at the instance of the War Department, to cure the evil of desertion are now becoming manifest, notes the New York Times. April and May usually show the heaviest record of desertions, for the reason that farming operations are resumed, and the dissatisfied soldiers who are inclined to desert are reasonably sure of finding work and shelter. Figures prepared at the War Department show that in April, 1886, the desertions from the army numbered 286; in April, 1890, they were 201, and in April of this year they had decreased to 112. The new laws for the amelioration of the condition of the privates are believed to be responsible for this decrease, although they have been in general and practical operation only since last November. It is now possible for any enlisted man to buy his discharge if discontented with his condition, and most of them prefer to do so rather than desert. The establishment of the canteen, reduction of hours of duty, and other changes have also operated to make the private better satisfied with his life.

Senator Manderson thinks that one of the means that should be employed in taming the savage bands of Indians which are making life a burden to the people and the soldiers on the frontier is to "take away their ponies and supply oxen instead." He would also take away their firearms. The confiscation of their arms would evidently be a wise move, adds the American Dairyman. The "noble red man" is altogether too careless in his use of deadly weapons. While the disarmament project commends itself to everyone who desires to see Indian outrages suppressed, it is not so easy to understand what benefit is to result from an exchange of horses for oxen. These uncivilized sons of the forest know no more about using oxen for agricultural purposes than they do about writing poetry in the Greek language. Until they were taught to use them oxen would be of no use to the Indians, and it is safe to assume that the Indians would be of no use to the oxen. But, whatever may be the case with Indians, there are a good many white men who might profitably keep less horses and more oxen. Thirty years ago, in large portions of New England, a great many oxen were kept for farm work. Gradually the oxen disappeared and horses were substituted. There were some advantages in the change, but there were also serious drawbacks. In some respects and for some purposes horses made a better team, but there are places in which oxen are superior. There is a good deal of expense in the first cost of the team and in the expense of keeping. We believe that the tide will turn and that oxen for labor on small farms will regain much of their lost popularity. The man who raises nice steers and trains them well will be very likely to find them as saleable as any animals on his farm.

Sweetheart.

The sun fades out of the purple west,
The sleepy songsters have gone to rest,
The dew is over the rose's breast,
Dear love—good-by!
The shadows lengthen down the lane,
The crickets whistle a shrill refrain,
Sad night approaches with starry train,
Dear love—good-by!

The cold stars twinkle in yon blue sky,
So clear and silent, so vast and high,
The moon's cloud chariot rolleth by,
Sweetheart—farewell!
Day will dawn chill in the pallid morn,
No roseate flushes the east adorn,
So my days without thee will be all forlorn,
Sweetheart—farewell!

O blue eyes, weave ye no sorrowful spell,
O red lips, frame ye no sad farewell,
O true heart, love's sweet story tell,
Sweetheart—good-by?
Whisper with lips that are trembling, sweet,
Vows that a lover would have you repeat,
Then say farewell, for the hours are fleet,
Sweetheart—good-by!

JIM'S WAIF.

BY PAUL GRANT.

Down at Long Branch on a warm summer day, a young man was enjoying himself in the surf, together with two or three companions. They had all come down from New York on a little "lark." Jim swam remarkably well and delighted his friends and the company at large by some of his performances.

He was good-natured, too. He took out several girls he knew and helped them to float, and so made himself very popular.

Among others who watched him from the beach was a poor woman with a baby. At last, as he brought one girl back whom he had been teaching to swim, she beckoned to him.

"Young man," said she, "could you not kindly take my little baby out and give her a dip in the surf? She is puny and it would help her."

But Jim shook his head as he looked at the child.

"I'm afraid of babies," he said. "Never held one in my life. It might slip out of my hands and drown."

"No, I guess not," said the woman. "You can't hurt it, and the surf-bathing would help the little dear."

Jim hesitated, then he looked at the small, peaked face. "Give me the little dear,'" said he. "But don't you budge, for if the young one should squall, I am going to bring it back to you."

"It won't squall," said the woman. "It's not afeared."

The young man took the child cautiously, as though it was made of glass and might go to pieces in his hands; but it did not. Neither did it cry. So he waded off with it, grasping it tightly. At last he resolved to give it a gentle immersion. Far from being frightened, the baby seemed pleased, and even ventured on a mild laugh. Jim now returned to the beach and proffered it to its mother.

"The kid seemed pleased," he said. "It laughed."

"Poor dear," said the woman. "She has been very sick. Young gentleman, your bath has been a God-send to her. Now you see you can't hurt her, couldn't you give her another dip?"

After a little persuasion, Jim agreed and went off with the baby. This time he joined his companions, and amused himself with now dipping, now floating the child on his hand. After a time he wearied of this sport, and returned to the beach to give the child to its mother. But she was nowhere to be found!

Horrified, the young fellow ran up and down the beach, unmindful of his scanty bathing suit, anxiously inquiring:

"Where's the mother of this child?"

Nobody knew. Then everyone began to make merry at his expense.

"Made you a present?" cried one.

"A handsome legacy," said another.

"Hello, Jim," cried his companions, who, seeing the commotion, had come ashore, "what's up?"

"The wretched woman has vanished."

"You were green, indeed, to take the brat," said they.

"I'll drop it very soon," said Jim, setting it down on the sand.

"No, you don't, either," said the policeman on duty. "This beach is not to be made a foundling hospital."

"But I don't want this baby," remonstrated Jim.

"Can't help it. Take it up." And Jim was forced to obey. "You can take it back to town and carry it to some charitable institution," the official deigned to suggest.

"What could have become of the woman?" cried Jim, in wild despair.

Nobody knew; no one had seen her walk away. Everybody thought it a fine joke, and everybody laughed—except the baby. Jim had taken it up a little roughly, and it began to cry.

The young man looked about him, full of horror.

"Ladies," cried he, approaching a group of women. "For God's sake, ladies, take this thing! I can't do anything with it!"

But the ladies, with one consent, refused. "No, indeed, they would not touch it!"

Wildly the young man ran up and down the beach. The strange woman was nowhere to be seen.

"Come, Jim," cried his companions. "Time we were dressing to go back to town."

"Certainly, but what am I to do with this — this — thing — while I dress?"

"I know," cried one kind friend. "We'll leave it at the dressing room after you have dressed."

Jim eagerly agreed to this, but the man in charge blocked that little game.

"Say, sir," said Jim, "I'll just leave this little one out here while I go in and dress."

"No, you won't, either," said the man. "You take it in with you."

Jim set the screaming child down on the floor while he made his toilet. He tore his wet hair with rage.

"Hush, you brat!" but it yelled the louder. "Oh, my goodness! This is dreadful!"

"Jim!" cried his friends from the next room. "Can't you make it hush? Muffle it in a wet towel."

"I wish to goodness I did know how they do stop them up! Deuce take that woman! Where are my shoes! Get off my shoes!"—to the helpless baby. He pulled out the shoes and rolled it on its side. "There now! It's fallen on my coat!"

He continued to hunt up the different articles of attire on which the baby seemed to have a special faculty of falling, while it screamed so that it made his ears ring and his head ache.

"I declare this thing is enough to make one mad!"

At last he was dressed and sauntered out.

"Go back and get that child," said the dressing-room keeper.

"I won't," said Jim. "I'm not going to lug it to town."

"You shan't leave it here. I'll call a policeman and have you arrested if you don't take it right up and get away from here."

Remembering his late encounter with that official, Jim angrily obeyed.

When they learned that he had to take it with him to town his companions all forsook him and fled.

In its dripping state the little creature was most detrimental to his good clothes. The angry Jim tried to hold it at arm's length, and so nearly let it fall. And thus he elicited a running fire of comment from the bystanders.

"You'll kill that child fooling with it that way," said one.

"Ugh! The brute!" cried another. "The poor innocent!" as the baby began to cry afresh.

"It's all very well for you to talk that way," retorted the angry Jim, "but none of you would do any better in my place."

"Sure, I doubt ef they would do as well, the spalpeens," cried an old Irish woman. "Sure, the crayther is cowl! Here, I'll give you me ould shawl," and removing a faded article of apparel from her ample person, she proceeded to wrap the waif in it.

"Couldn't you just take it to town with you," suggested Jim. "You have so much more experience in the handling of this sort of article than I have."

"No, indade! Niver a bit will I fetch it! Git away from here, you young spalpeen!"

She shook her fist at him, and Jim retreated.

No sooner was he on the boat than Jim deposited his charge on a sofa in the cabin, and hid himself in a remote part of the steamer. But one of the boat officials soon hunted him up.

"How dare you desert your baby?"

"It's not my baby," cried the badgered Jim.

"How not yours, when you brought it on the boat?"

I—it's--

"Don't its me. Go this instant and get it, or I'll have you arrested when we reach town."

The wretched Jim was forced to obey, and resume his hated load amid the jeers and jokes of the passengers who had been his fellow bathers on the beach.

By this time the enraged baby had become unmanageable. It screamed with rage and refusing to sit down it stiffened itself so that it slid off his knee. The wretched young man was ready by this time to throw it overboard.

"Ladies," said he, turning to a group of feminines near him, "for God's sake take this child and make it hush, for I can't."

"Sir!" cried one, haughtily; the others answered with a stony stare.

Turning from this stiff upper crust, he appealed to a motherly-looking Irish woman.

"Faith an' be jabbers, no," she answered promptly. "Don't play off your thricks on me, young man!"

While Jim had been absent on this begging tour some one had appropriated his seat, so he now paraded disconsolately about, every one whom he approached shunning or jeering him.

Suddenly some one touched his arm and turning he saw a young lady in deep mourning.

"Here, let me hold your baby for you," said she.

"O, thank you, madam, God bless you," cried the wretched Jim.

She made room for him on the seat beside her.

"Mind, Gertrude," said a lady on the other side of her, "he may run off and leave you in the lurch."

"No, I expect not," said the lady, half smiling. She took the hapless baby, and as she set it on her lap, to Jim's astonishment it ceased crying. "Poor little creature!" said she, wiping its tear-stained face with her handkerchief. Then she tried to straighten out its clothes. "Why, it's wringing wet!"

Jim hurriedly explained the situation.

"How shameful! I heard those men laughing about it," motioning toward a group watching them.

"Yes, the wretches! I feel like fighting the whole lot."

"This child is hungry," and opening her lunch basket the lady took out a piece of soft bread and fed it to the baby with the remainder of a bottle of cold tea.

Thus comforted, the waif began to look about, and its joy was complete when its benefactress gave it a chicken bone to suck after getting Jim to scrape it clean with his pocket knife. In its rapture it began to coo, and its new friend replied to its remarks in baby talk.

"You certainly know all about babies," said the delighted Jim.

"I've lost mine, and the remembrance of my darling makes my heart go out to all other babies," she said.

"O!" cried Jim, eagerly, "then wouldn't you like to take this one?"

"No, indeed!" cried she, pushing it off. "No one can ever take my Annie's place!"

"No, to be sure, madam," said the young man, hastily. "Of course not; it was brutal of me to suggest it. But please help me with this one till we get to town."

When the boat landed at the wharf the baby was fast asleep. Wrapping it well in the old shawl, she laid it in his arms. He held it gingerly and then took his way over the gangway to the elevated road.

After some thought, he determined to go home and let his mother arrange with some charitable institute for its reception the next day.

The horror of his parents when the young man came on them with his strange burden language fails to depict.

"Poor boy," cried his mother as he hurriedly told his tale.

"Well, who would have thought you such a fool!" said his father.

"Don't speak of it!" said Jim, "but this is a lesson to me. I'll never touch another baby as long as I live."

"Come, come," cried his mother, "make no rash promises."

She now took the waif in hand and fixed it off comfortably for the night. The next day a rich and childless friend, calling and hearing the story, determined to adopt the baby. She has done a good part by it.

This was years ago. The waif is now a tall girl in her teens and very pretty. Jim is still unmarried, is still called a young man. And he now takes a lively interest in the waif.

The Speed of the Duck.

Dr. Charles Macrum, a wealthy retired physician of Portland, Oregon, who for the last three years has devoted his time to hunting and fishing and writing stories for the papers, has made a study of the speed of the duck, and says the canvas-back can fly faster than any other member of the duck family.

"The canvas-back can distance any other duck," said the doctor. "It can fly two miles a minute and keep it up for hours. The mallard is the slowest, but with an effort can go a mile a minute and keep it up for hours. The gadwade duck is not found in the east often, but is numerous in Oregon. The members of this family can travel eighty miles an hour. The broad-bill duck is almost as swift as the canvas-back, but can not keep the race as long as the other.

"You may think that geese fly slower than mallard duck. This is not so. With the slow movement of their big wings they do not appear to be flying rapidly, but they travel from eighty to one hundred miles an hour and keep it up for a day."—[Detroit Free Press.

An Aged Crow.

"Do you know that the average life of a crow is 100 years?" said an Atlantian, who poses as a naturalist, yesterday. "It is so. One was killed down in Dougherty County a few weeks ago with '37' branded on his back. He was feathered everywhere except just between the wings on his back, where the figures '37' could be distinctly seen branded in the flesh. I can see but one meaning to that, and that is that some one caught him in 1837, branded the figures on his back and released him."—[Atlanta Constitution.

"LAND OF FIRE."

Some Facts About the Island of Terra del Fuego.

Not so Desolate a Place as has Been Represented.

The notions of Terra del Fuego (Land of Fire) which prevailed ten years ago have been completely upset by recent explorations. The latest travelers there are Messrs. Rousson and Willems, who have just returned to France from their scientific mission in Terra del Fuego. These explorers believe the northern part of the island can be turned to good account, and that the day is not far distant when large herds and flocks will be raised upon ranches established all along the river valleys. A large district north of the Straits of Magellan, in Patagonia, which was wholly unoccupied twelve years ago, is now full of little farms devoted to raising sheep and cattle.

The owners have prospered so well that the territory they occupy has become too crowded. It is impossible to extend this business further north, and the farmers will, therefore, be compelled to turn to Terra del Fuego, which will receive the overflow from Patagonia. On Dawson Island, near the northwest coast of Terra del Fuego, Jesuit fathers are now engaged in stock-raising, and for two years or so a fine ranch has been established on the northern coast of Terra del Fuego, where there are today about 20,000 sheep and 6000 cattle. The English have been the first to establish themselves in this territory. Stock-raisers are now reaping a profit of 50 per cent. per annum. The explorers say the availability of the island for stock-raising has been amply proven, and there is now no doubt that a prosperous future is before it.

Rousson and Willems explored the northern part of the island, about sixty miles south of the Straits of Magellan. They mapped all the little rivers, and found that the Cullen River, which empties into the Atlantic Ocean, is quite an important stream. The valley of this river is a fine country, and the rich herbage afforded abundant nourishment for the horses upon which the party rode. They met the Ona Indians all through their journey. Quite a number of them were 6 feet 6 inches high and very muscular.

They wear only over their shoulders ill-made capes of guanaco skin. The only ornament which they possess consists of a bracelet or a collar of shells. These Indians inhabit about two-thirds of the island. The men occupy themselves wholly with procuring food. Their bows and arrows are always with them, and they use flint arrow-heads. Much of their time is given to making weapons of the chase and war. They are continually in trouble with the Indians to the west and south of them, from whom they differ greatly.

The women carry the burdens while on the march, prepare the camps, keep the fires going and take care of the children. In preparing their habitation they dig circular excavations about six feet in diameter and a foot and a half in depth, usually on the side of a hill. Around the excavations they stick poles, upon which they place the tent, made of the skins of animals. Over the floor they scatter dried grass. The upper part of the tent is wholly open. Each of these little habitations shelters a family of three or four persons, who nestle together like a litter of puppies. The people are a nomad race.

They are frequently on the move, leaving one place as soon as the game there becomes scarce. For this reason the country is marked by the sites of old tents. The people are very much afraid of white men if they come in considerable force, but if their numbers greatly exceed the whites who visit them they are very impudent, and are likely to be hostile. They are not anthropophogists, as has been asserted. The fact that they are in the habit of burning the bones of the animals they eat probably gave rise to the report that they indulge in human flesh.

One camp of Onas communicates with another by fire. Using the roots of plants as torches, they are able to communicate with one another for great distances in the night time. There are no trees and very few shrubs in the northern part of the island. The quadrupeds are also few in number, but there is a large variety of birds.—[Chicago Times.

Taking Fire at the Mouth.

That a human being may become so completely supersaturated with alcohol as to take fire at the mouth as readily as a barrel of whiskey at the bung-hole seems to be an established fact. Dickens, who kills off the rag-and-bottle merchant in "Bleak House" in this way, claims to have investigated the subject thoroughly, and quotes many apparently well authenticated instances of what is called spontaneous combustion. Nevertheless, the possibility of the thing has been doubted by a considerable number of scientific men.

Many years ago, an inebriate of the name of Nolte, a German, residing at Columbus, Ind., was found dead, in a condition which warranted the belief that he had literally caught fire at the lips and been destroyed by internal combustion. His mouth had been burned to a shapeless hole, his tongue charred to a crisp, and all the respiratory organs partially consumed.

There is nothing incredible in this; the only wonder is that cases of the kind are infrequent. There are thousands of habitual drunkards whose breath is simply an alcoholic fume, and it is surprising that it does not ignite when it comes in close contact with flame. There must be such a large percentage of inflammable gas in vapor smelling so strongly of spirits that it would hardly surprise us to see any one of these liquor-soaked individuals combust, as Nolte is supposed to have done while lighting a cigar.

It is not correct, however, to call a catastrophe of this nature spontaneous combustion. The human body never bursts into flames, like a stack of damp hay, by reason of heat generated within itself. It is only when external fire reaches the animal phlogiston—or combustible element—that it ignites. When a man is surcharged with alcohol he had better not smoke, lest he share the fate of Andrew Nolte.—[New York Ledger.

Roses and Turks.

"It would give a genuine and religious Turk a fit if he saw how little appreciation Americans show for the rose and what little reverence they have for it," spoke a florist as he wrapped the foil about the stem of a boutonniere.

"The rose is, beyond question, the prettiest flower that blooms, and it was so considered by the Turks many years before the conquest of Grenada. There is a religious legend generally believed in throughout Turkey that the red rose sprang from a drop of the great prophet Mohammed's blood. Everything beautiful in nature is ascribed to him. The Turks, therefore, have great reverence for the flower, and allow it to bloom and die untouched, except on state occasions and for the purpose of making rose water.

"After the conquest by the Turks they would not worship in any church until the walls were cleansed and washed with rose water and thus purified by the blood of the prophet. It is used on the body for the same purpose. A Turk whose conscience is stung by some act or deed he has committed will caress and pay reverence to the rose to appease the wrath of the prophet and Allah.

"With these ideas inculcated in him from youth it would shock him severely to see the pretty flower strewn in the path of a bridal couple, thrown on the public stage or banked up in hundreds at a swell reception or party to be crushed and spoiled in an evening."

Relief For Rheumatism.

"This information," said a well known physician, "may save many lives; at any rate it will prove an invaluable boon to people suffering from rheumatism in any shape or form. Rheumatism, as nearly everybody knows, is caused by acidity of the blood. It should never be neglected. This remedy, as I know by long practice, is very efficacious and it is as simple as it is powerful.

"Here it is," he added. "When a rheumatic twinge is experienced the patient should proceed to a drug store and buy fifteen or twenty-five cents' worth of oil of gaulteria (oil of wintergreen), put ten drops on a lump of sugar, place it in the mouth, permit it to dissolve slowly and swallow it. This should be repeated at intervals of two hours until the last vestige of the malady has disappeared. In the meantime take a dose or two of Rochelle salts.

"That," said the physician, "is all there is to it, but if taken as I have prescribed it will save suffering humanity many dollars in doctors' bills, to say nothing of pains, aches and swellings. No. I charge nothing for this advice. It is simply given for the benefit of mankind."—[New York Herald.

Oldest United States Pensioner.

At Fishkill, Dutchess county, N. Y., lives Mrs. Ann Hyde, who has passed her 102d year. She was born in the village on April 28, 1780, two days before Washington's inauguration as president. She is extremely deaf and her eyesight is dim, but she rises at 7 o'clock in the morning, retires at 9 o'clock in the evening, and is blessed with a good appetite. She converses intelligently and is fond of relating reminiscences of her early days.

Mrs. Hyde is a widow of a veteran of the war of 1812 and the oldest pensioner on the rolls of the United States government. On March 31, 1880, she was awarded a prize of $15 by the Poughkeepsie Sunday Courier as the longest lived resident of Ulster and Dutchess counties.

A Horse Battle.

The herds of horses on a Western ranch, roaming over so large a space, rarely encounter one another. When they do, the mares evince only the smallest possible amount of curiosity, but join and graze. Different is it with the stallions. With but a moment's preparation, they rush wildly at one another like mad bulls, neighing in what seems the mockery of a neigh, and with head in air and tail curving proudly, they rush and plunge and rear, kicking and biting, stamping one on the other until the ground and horses are covered with blood, and exhaustion of one forces a surrender and retreat. As I have said, the fickle mares march off with the conqueror at their head, while the defeated lags wearily behind. One of the most terrible battles that probably ever took place between ranch stallions occurred near the home ranch of the Little Missouri Horse Farm in the spring of 1888, at the time when the several bunches or droves of horses were being driven in from the ranges for an account of stock and for the branding of the young colts. It happened by the merest chance that three droves came in together with the stallions leading. Naturally the three joined, and at once arose the question of leadership. This could only be settled by a battle, and before the herders could begin to form any plan for separating them, the three stallions were engaged in fiercest battle. As described by those who saw it, this battle was so savage and so bloody that it seemed certain that at least one of the combatants must be killed. It lasted a little more than 20 minutes, and when the "smoke of battle" drifted away and the fight was done, a big gray Percheron called Napoleon was seen to be the victor, and he it was that, with uplifted head and proudly curved tail, led the company of mares and colts to the pastures, while the two defeated ones marched together like whipped curs, dejectedly in the rear. In this instance, although the fight was an unusually desperate one, and all three horses were badly cut and torn, none of the three suffered more than temporary discomfort.—[Harper's Weekly.

A Plant's Self-Protection Against Sheep.

The subterranean clover has been driven by its numerous enemies to take refuge at last in a very remarkable and almost unique mode of protecting its offspring. This particular kind of clover affects smooth and close-cropped hillsides, where the sheep nibble down the grass and other herbage almost as fast as it springs up again.

Now, clover seeds resemble their allies of the pea and bean tribe in being exceedingly rich in starch and other valuable foodstuffs. Hence, they are much sought after by the inquiring sheep, which eat them off wherever found, as exceptionally nutritious and dainty morsels. Under these circumstances, the subterranean clover has learnt to produce small heads of bloom, pressed close to the ground, in which only the outer flowers are perfect and fertile, while the inner ones are transformed into tiny, wriggling corkscrews.

As soon as the fertile flowers have begun to set their seed, by the kind aid of the bees, the whole stem bends downward, automatically, of its own accord; the little corkscrews then worm their way into the turf beneath, and the pods ripen and mature in the actual soil itself, where no prying ewe can poke an inquisitive nose to grub them up and devour them.

Cases like this point in certain ways to the absolute high-water mark of vegetable ingenuity; they go nearest of all in the plant world to the similitude of conscious animal intelligence.

Just What a Toddy Blossom Is.

The toddy blossom on the nose has been for years an affliction to the amateur inebriate. Usually he is interested as to the philosophy of the symptom. It is very simple. The skin that covers the nose is very full of little blood vessels, highly vascular as we say. Alcohol weakens the nerves which control the circulation of the blood. Thus an accumulation of blood at the end of the nasal organ closes up the mouth of one of the little sweat glands which are found all over the body, so the perspiration fails to escape from the poro that is ordinarily open. It forms a clot, and nature seeks to remove the clot by inflammation. That makes a toddy blossom. Long continued indulgence in an excess of alcohol occasions a general clotting of the sweat glands, which results in a swelling of the nose, so that a man's proboscis may eventually assume the appearance of a sweetbread, through fatty enlargement of the degenerated tissue. This is the final stage.

By applying a little of the best carriage oil varnish carefully with a camel's hair brush to the edges of broken china, the parts being neatly joined together, the fracture will, when thoroughly dry, be hardly perceptible, and the china will stand fire and water.

KILLED SON AND SELF.

Double Crime of an Episcopal Clergyman in Virginia.

The Rev. Frank D. Lee, son of the late Cassius F. Lee, residing near the theological seminary in Fairfax County, Va., in a moment of temporary aberration of mind killed his only son, aged nine years, and then committed suicide with a pistol. The deed was not discovered until noon next day, when the house, which was securely fastened within, was broken open, and the two bodies were found on a bed in such a position as to reveal the facts.

Mr. Lee was a graduate of the University of Virginia and of the Theological Seminary, and for several years exercised acceptably his ministry in the Episcopal Church. He was compelled to give it up on account of ill health, and since 1886 he has lived in retirement on Seminary Hill.

GERONIMO SLAIN.

Deputy Sheriffs Put an End to the Notorious Stage Robber.

Deputy Sheriff Gray arrived at Tucson, Arizona, with the body of the notorious Mexican stage robber Geronimo, and Leon, his accomplice. They have been robbing stages in Southern Arizona for the past five years, and officers have been after them continually. Gray and his posse ran them down in the mountains near Panate. They made a fight and Geronimo fired five and Leon three shots without effect. Geronimo was killed; Leon surrendered.

Geronimo robbed the United States mail and stage passengers more than a dozen times, and has committed many murders. He was captured several times but always escaped. Leon, his accomplice, up to six months ago, was a deputy sheriff.

A FATAL PRANK.

A Drunken Man Drowned With a Child at Parkerford, Penn.

Jennie Knerr, aged ten, and several other little girls were wading in the Schuylkill at Parkerford, Penn., when Fred Hixbie, aged twenty-eight, came along intoxicated, saying: "I'll show you how to swim." He seized two of the children under his arms and started in. One of them escaped, but with the other, little Jennie Knerr, he started to swim to the other side. He had not gone far when he and the child sank. The bodies were subsequently recovered.

OUR COUNTRY'S INTELLIGENT ARTISANS.

No class of citizens is more indispensable to the Republic than the intelligent and well trained artisans. Their influence is exerted in manifold ways. They are indispensable to the prosperity of agriculture, not only as consumers of its products, but as inventors and producers of the machinery which lightens the farmer's toil. They are indispensable to the safety and perpetuity of the government, for in this age the man of importance in national defense are not so much those who can hold a weapon as those who can construct it. The greatest reliance for the continued independence of the Republic is not so much to be found in the numbers of its population as in the number and diversity of its industries and the skill, intelligence and inventive power of its mechanics.

The encouragement of our industries, therefore, should be deemed by us as demanded alike by self-interest and national duty. To permit the products of labor performed abroad to enter freely into our home market in competition with the products of American labor would be to require one of two things—either that our workmen accept such reduction of wages as would enable the home made article to compete with the foreign in our own market, or that the American manufacture, unable longer to pay present rates of wages, should retire and leave the field to his foreign rival.

LEGAL IMPERTINENCE

Honest witnesses anxious to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," do not by any means always receive from the Bench the protection to which they are entitled. They are badgered, brow-beaten, and sometimes made to commit involuntary perjury by "smart" lawyers, "the Court" smiling the while and seeming to enjoy the overbearing insolence of the bar. It is a disgrace to the dignity of justice that such things are permitted and even tacitly encouraged.

Why should a respectable citizen be brought into court to be made the butt for the stale wit and libelous innuendoes of so-called professional gentlemen? Why do judges even allow the ordinary courtesies of life to be violated in the tribunals, where if anywhere, the rules of decency and decorum should by rigidly enforced? Why should a pert attorney be permitted to imply by his mode of examination that a gentleman and man of honor, whom he knows to be such, has appeared on the witness stand for the express purpose of perjuring himself, and is, upon the whole, a suspicious character?

Is it not enough that an honest man should be taken from his business to testify in a case in which he has no personal interest, but he must also have his reputation assailed and his feelings wrung by a lawyer who is paid for the job?

By the death of Sir John Macdonald England loses her strongest grip upon the Dominion of Canada. Although a staunch defender and admirer of a monarchial form of government Sir John Macdonald was in many respects a great man, and as a managing politician he has had few equals. His extreme jealousy of the commercial supremacy of the United States caused him to do many things to arouse the enmity of citizens of this country; but from his point of view his acts were in the main justifiable.

The collapse in the United States Treasury which was billed by our democratic friends to take place about this time has not materialized, and what is more it will not. No nation on earth is to-day as solid financially as the United States, and it is the Republican party which has made it so, and which will keep it so as long as it remains in power.

Long-headed democrats, such as Ex-Congressman Converse of Ohio, admit the impossibility of defeating Maj. McKinley for governor of that State, and advise their party managers to devote their entire attention to an attempt to capture the legislature.

Every new vessel added to our navy increases the respect with which Uncle Sam is treated by foreign nations. Nations are like individuals; when it is known that they are prepared to fight they are seldom interfered with.

The mugwump won't be so lonesome as usual this month. The college graduate is abroad. He, too, knows everything.

Good mills and good markets will make any country rich in a short. The South has both.

WORK AND HAPPINESS

A man's life is to be measured by what he does in it, and the more he thinks and feels the more, strictly speaking, he lives. "I don't believe," said Lord Stanley in a recent address to college students at Glasgow, "that an unemployed man, however amiable and otherwise respectable, ever was or ever can be, really happy. Work and happiness are two terms that go hand in hand through life."

It is true we all know of cases where loss of life has occurred from overwork, but should we study into the matter more closely we would discover that when men break down from overwork it is more commonly from neglect of the physical health. Lord Stanley was right when he said in the address referred to that he doubted whether "hard work steadily and regularly carried on, ever yet hurt anybody."

The maxims of men often reveal their character. St. Paul said, "He that will not work neither shall he eat." That of Sir Walter Scott was, "Never to be doing nothing," and of Voltaire, "Always be at work." To be happy we must work, for idleness is the snare of the Evil One. Let every one be occupied, and occupied in the highest employment of which his nature is capable, and die with the consciousness that he has done his best.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, June 19, 1891.

The President has expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the work of the Ohio State convention, both as to the platform adopted and the candidates nominated, and he believes that the republicans will carry the State by one of those old-time republican Ohio majorities which used to set the pace for the party in other States.

President and Mrs. Harrison, accompanied by their grandchildren, left yesterday for their Cape May Point cottage, where Mrs Harrison and the children expect to remain for some time. Mr. Harrison will not remain with them, but he expects to spend a part of every week them during the warm weather.

Secretary Foster was very anxious to have attended the Ohio convention, and had fully intended doing so, but at the last minute he found that important public business made it necessary that he should remain here, so he did not get off to Ohio until yesterday morning. He said before leaving that he was just as well satisfied with what the convention did as he would have been if he had taken part therein as a delegate.

Secretary Noble, much improved in appearance, and he says also in feeling, is back at his desk as hard at work as if he had just entered the cabinet. He has not now nor has he ever had the slightest intention of resigning but he says he feels under obligations to the newspapers for having picked out so many nice places for him, and he regrets that all of them were made contingent upon his leaving the Cabinet.

Mr. H. J. Schulties, of the District of Columbia, has been appointed an additional member of the commission which is to go to Europe to investigate immigration. He was appointed as the representative of the Federation of Labor. General Grosvenor, who resigned his place on the immigration commission by telegraph this week, has been appointed special commissioner for duty in connection with the admission of foreign goods to the World's Fair. Whatever his fault, his resignation was a manly document. Here it is: "Fearing that the assaults upon me by certain of the press on misrepresentation will impair, if not destroy my usefulness in the immigration commission, I respectfully tender my resignation. I cannot afford to hold office to the injury of my party. Let my resignation take effect at the pleasure of the department."

A mass meeting has been called for to-night by some of Washington's most prominent business men, to take the necessary steps towards raising a guarantee fund sufficiently large to properly entertain the National G. A. R. which is to be invited to hold its 1892 meeting in this city. There is little doubt that all the money necessary can easily be raised, and if the veterans will accept the invitation to come here next year they will be given a reception they will never forget, besides being given an opportunity to inspect what is now conceded to be the most beautiful city in the world.

There is reason to believe that the President and Secretary Tracy have recently been devoting considerable time to the subject of coaling stations for our navy in the West Indies. Secretary Tracy says we must have one, and that we ought to have at least two in those waters, where England has four. An important conference on this subject took place at the White House this week, which was attended by the President, Secretary Tracy, Hon. John W. Foster, representing the Department of State, and Real Admiral Gherardi, who has had charge of the negotiations for obtaining Mole Saint Nicholas from Hayti. Samana Bay we can get from San Domingo whenever we say the word, and although the negotiations are now in a state of suspension it is believed by those who ought to know that we shall ultimately secure Mole Saint Nicholas also.

They'll Say It was Theirs in Five Years.

From the Iowa State Register.

The free trade party is only doing now what it has been doing during all the time of its existence—coming up behind and claiming each victory won by Republicans. They cannot steal reciprocity.

The Colored Mans Friends.

From the Keokuk (Iowa) Gate City.

All the colored voters in the South do not elect one Republican official. They add not a particle of strength to the Republican party. Instead, one-half of the Southern States and a majority of the Southern whites would vote the republican ticket today and make certain the election of Republican Presidents and Congresses if only the Republicans would yield that the colored people should be disfranchised. If the Republicans would yield that, it would give them the country South and North and absolute control of the Government. And all the colored population of the United States do not give the Republican party a single electoral vote for President or a single Congressman; not one. Instead, they add more than twenty to the electoral votes for the Democrats which the Republicans have to overcome because the colored people are counted in the representation. The Republican party, despite all that, has stood for the rights of the colored people to be voters. Now then if the colored people drive the Republican party away from their defense, they have not taken anything away from the strength of the Republican party, but they will have deprived themselves of the support of the only party that got for them and keeps for them a freedom and rights they could not get or keep for themselves.

Tetter, Salt Rheum and Cancer are all cured by P P P. The effects on these diseases are perceptible after the first bottle of P P P was used.

ANOTHER CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

Lake City, Florida.

P P P Mf'g Co, Savannah, Ga:

Gentlemen.—I had rheumatism for over six years, and last May was taken down and confined to my bed. My legs and feet were swollen and the color of a red apple, and I was in a fearful condition. I heard of P P P (Prickly Ash, Poke Root, and Potassium), and after seeing what the ingredients were—as the formula is on the bottle—I concluded to try it, and after taking three small bottles was able to go down town and attend to my business, and I must say that I feel like another man. Am now taking the large size, and to-day I believe that I will soon be as likely as any man of 61 years of ago can expect to be.

A. C. LANG,

The Country Life.

Northwestern Agriculturist.

In cities it is only here and there one who makes a brilliant success. Where one makes a great record thousands remain in obscurity or die in the desperate struggle for life which is constantly going on. On the farm any young man of industry and good habits is sure of competence and a position of influence among his neighbors. His children have fair opportunities to learn what is taught in schools, and little opportunity to learn the vices which plant themselves on every corner in the large cities. Health, competence and good social position is at the command of every one in the country. In cities few reach the higher grades, and then only after a struggle which costs more than the prize is worth. Boys and girls should both weigh well the advantages and disadvantages of the change before choosing life in the city.

Concord Standard: At Martin Blackwelder's, just across the county line north of here, there is to be seen perhaps the prettiest oak in North Carolina. It is eighteen feet in circumference, and at the height of seven feet the limbs go out in perfect symmetry to the distance of thirty feet. Through the thick foliage not a particle of sunlight reaches. Mr. Blackwelder thinks it 200 years old, and would not take a mountain for it.

Lumberton Robesonian says that Sheriff Pitman captured Wayn Hill on Wednesday; he was a refugee from justice, being charged with murder committed in Mississippi. Two hundred dollars reward was offered for his apprehension and delivery at Winona, Miss, where he is wanted.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich, and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at A. Wadsworth's drug store.

They Give Themselves Away.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Of many free traders it may be said that they abhor American tin plate with a fervor inconsistent with a belief that the object of their hatred does not exist.

How it Looks in Iowa.

From the Iowa State Register.

Good crops, steadily employed labor, good prices for surplus products, and a complete Republican victory are the present promises of the jubilee year.

Greensboro Workman says the Horticultural Society of North Carolina will hold its ninth Annual Fair in that city on the 4th and 5th days of August.

No cure-all or untried remedy will cure as does Simmons Liver Regulator.

We Want American Americans.

From the Detroit Tribune.

We welcome all to this country who wish to become citizens, and are capable of performing the duties of citizenship, but we insist that they shall conform themselves to American institutions and to American forms of government.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for July has some very interesting recollections of the Empress Eugenie and the Court of the Tuileries comprise the leading article in the July number. It was written especially for this magazine by Mme. Carette, nee Bouvet, author of "Souvenirs de la Cour des Tuileries," "Madam Campar," etc., and translated by Mrs. Frank Leslie. The article is charmingly written and is accompanied by many fine illustrations, including a new portrait of the Empress. This number of the magazine also contains the following illustrated articles: "Some Distinguished Literary Women of America," by Mrs. Van Etten Mack; "On a Chilian Hacienda," by J. S. Whitman; "A Summer Among the Icebergs"; "Pleasures and Pains of Golf"; "An Old Mexican Sport"; "A Ferrara Pilgrimage," by Herbert Pierson, and "The National Storehouse of Wealth." Nellie Hart Woodworth contributes another of her delightful bird papers, and William Elroy Curtis gives a good explanation of Secretary Blaine's Reciprocity policy. A new installment of the serial "John Maggs, Barbarian," by Scott Campbell, is given; and there are five interesting short stories.

Close Up the Ranks and Well Win.

From the Rochester Democrat.

The Republican army must maintain its discipline, its loyalty and its equipment. So doing, nothing can stand in the way of its winning a grand national victory.

Don't suffer from dyspepsia. Take Simmons Liver Regulator. It always cures.

Two Good Things Together.

From the Peoria Transcript.

The completion of the reciprocity treaty between Spain and the United States has been officially declared in the former country, and we shall soon begin to reap the benefits thereof in the form of largely increased trade with Cuba and an improved prospect of Republican victory in 1892.

Wednesday. June 24, 1891.

☞ The steamer Lizzie Burrus will commence running to Nag' Head on the 1st of July.

☞ Irish potatoes still demand good prices in the Northern markets and our truckers are busy shipping.

☞ The weather of the past week has been entirely too warm for comfort. Wednesday it was 94 degrees in the shade.

☞ We learn that the large saw mill of Fleetwood & Jackson at Hertford is nearly ready to begin work. Hertford is coming to the front.

☞ Mr. Thomas E Elliott jr. of Norfolk and Mrs. Minnie Kellum, of Portsmouth, where married here Saturday afternoon The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. L. Williams

☞ The time for listing your taxes is drawing to a close and only a few more days remain. If you have not listed you had better do so at once and save trouble and expense.

☞ From a copy of the Neobrar, Neb., Tribune we see that Judge James A Cooley, who lived here years ago, died at that place very suddenly on the 4th inst. He was a nephew of Mrs. C. C. Greene

☞ N. Nash Burfoot, clerk at the Norfolk and Southern depot was married last Wednesday afternoon to Miss Rennie, daughter of Mr. Abner Aydlett. The ceremony took place at home of the brides father.

☞ We see that Dr. Stephen B. Weeks, of this county, now at Johns Hopkins University, has been elected Professor of History at Trinity College which is to be removed to Durham. Dr. Weeks is the right man in the right place.

☞ G. S. Palmer, Commission Merchant, New York, quotes prices for truck as follows: Irish potatoes choice, $4.50; beans, 75 cents to $1; cucumbers, 75c to $1.25; tomatoes, $1 to $1.50; blackberries 10 to 12 cents; peaches, $1.50 to $2.50 per crate.

☞ The Y. M. C A of this place is now in a flourishing condition. The rooms of this Association are large and tastefully furnished and in a short time will be open at night. The Sunday afternoon exercises are very entertaining and instructive and are well attended. Let our people aid this Association in its good work,

☞ The closing exercises of the Elizabeth City Academy last Wednesday and Thursday nights was witnessed by a large crowd, in fact the hall was so packed that many could not find seats and left. The very warm weather made it uncomfortable for those that were fortunate enough to find a seat, but all seemed to be pleased and the teachers should feel proud of the conduct of the pupils. On Wednesday night there were four contestants for the gold medal. Miss Lucy Twine spoke first her subject being "The Legend of the Organ Builder" and was followed by Miss Almira Allen, subject "Karl"; she was followed by Miss Estelle Simpson who recited "The Old Forsaken Schoolhouse." Miss Linda Lelon was the last contestant, with "The Wife's Vow" All the young ladies recited well but the judges decided that Miss Simpson was entitled to the medal. The judges were Messrs. Albertson, Overman and Sadler. On Thursday night notwithstanding the rain the hall was again packed. The first contest was by seven young men for a gold medal and proved to be a close contest. Mr. Mathias Mansfield was the first speaker and his speech "Heroes of '76" was well delivered. He was followed by Mr. Gaston G. Bell who spoke with much force and feeling of "Our Fallen Heroes.' The third contestant was Mr. E. P. Carter who spoke of "Southern Chivalry" in a way that impressed all. Mr. C. H. Wood's subject was "Our Native Land" and he was followed by Mr. J. W. Stewart, his subject being "Stars and Stripes," "Our Country, Past and Present" was delivered by Mr. H. S. Davis, who was followed by the victorious contestant Mr. T. D. Johnston. He declaimed the "Death of Lafayette" in a touching manner. The young gentlemen all spoke well but the judges, Messrs. J. W. Albertson, Col. Luke and W. G. Underwood, decided in favor of Mr. Johnston with Mr. Wood a close second. The gold medal offered by Dr. White for the best vocal solo was won by Miss Rebecca Murray. The judges were Miss Johnston and Messrs. Old and Ehringhaus. The medals were presented by Judge Albertson, in the following order: French medal, Miss Linda Delon; Latin, James Hollowell; Declamation, T. D. Johnstone, Recitation, Miss Estelle Simpson; Scholarship medal in primary department, Miss Salhe Jennings; Vocal music, Miss Rebecca Murray; Art, Miss May Wilson; History, J. W. Stewart and Edward Daughtery. The instrumental music was good and the commencement reflects much credit on the teachers and pupils.

☞ The venerable Henry A. Bond, of Edenton, who was one of the oldest and best known citizens of that city, died on the 17th inst. His age was 81 years

☞ The three masted schooner Wm. H. Hopkins, from New York to Mayport, Florida, is reported to be ashore at Big Kennekeet. The crew, seven in number, were saved. The vessel is a total loss.

☞ It is said that the smoke of burning camphor will expel mosquitoes from a room. A piece of sponge or flannel dipped in camphorated spirits and made fast to the top of the bedstead will secure you immunity at nights. They can also be kept off by rubbing exposed parts with a decoction of pennyroyal.

—A comfortable back room, in second story of the CAROLINIAN Building, for rent. Suitable for office or bed room.

☞ There are traps and poisons innumerable for abating rat plagues, but the following is said to be the best and safest method: It is to catch two or three in a trap, and afier singing off their hair set them loose with a coating of the following mixture: Dissolve two ounces of glue, two ounces tincture of assafœtida and two ounces potash in water, and add half an ounce of phosphorous to one mixture. Rats treated with this compound slightly heated, scare their fellows, and there will be no more trouble for months. Another good plan is to scatter dry chloride of lime around and in the rat holes.

—When you are at Fowler & Co's ask to see their $1,25 black henrietta, ☞ Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness a man can have in this world he will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace and with his family, is something real. It does not make much difference, reader, whether you own your own home or have one little room in that house, you can make it a true home to you. You can people it with such words and turn to it with such fancies that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and it will be to you the very perfection of home.

—All the latest spring dress goods may be procured at Fowler & Co's, including mohairs, cashmeres, henrettas, albatross and light weight flannels in all desirable shades.

☞ It is a common saying that a man never fully forgives the slayer of his dog. And it often happens that the uglier and meaner the dog, the larger is the malice cherished against the man who took its life. And it is said that it is because of this well understood knowledge of average human nature that legislators are so timid about tackling the dog question. Says a cotemporary, "This dog question is no small affair and the small fry politicians act wisely in letting it alone." The poor man will divide his bread with his dog, aye, and he will get fighting mad" with his best friend should he injure the canine. If there is any moral to this it is that it is well to learn human nature before denouncing the dog.

—If you want a silk dress go to Fowler & Co's. They keep a full line of Surahs in dark and evening shades, Faille, Peau de Soie, Armure and the cheapest line of China Silks to be found in Elizabeth City.

The Proposed Sale of the County Almshouse

The Board of Commissioners of Pasquotank county have advertised for sealed proposals for the purchase of the almshouse and for a new site for another, from six to ten miles from Elizabeth City.

The common instincts of humanity have induced all nations—even the most despotic—to provide for the poor a suitable abode and wholesome food, without regard to cost and with no expection of any return from the labor of the inmates. There are schools of correction and penitentiaries, where persons convicted of crime are forced to work; but, unless poverty be a crime, there is no reason why paupers should be expected to earn their living.

The present almshouse is conveniently located and it answers all the requirements of the situation, There is no reason for changing the site, except upon the ground of economy, which is to be obtained from the proceeds of pauper labor.

Our people are liberal, just, and humane. They have no desire to save money in this way. Indeed, great public indignation has been expressed at the proposal. Of course the commissioners have the power to make the change in defiance of public opinion. They have absolute control of taxation and of all county property. They can sell the jail and the court house. They can place one in Newland on the edge of the Dismal Swamp, and the other at the bottom of Sound Neck Then they can say to the people, "You did not place us here and you cannot remove us. We are above you and defy you. We have despotic power and will exercise it to suit ourselves. What are you going to do about it?"

We make no reflections upon our present Board. They are all reputable gentlemen and our personal friends. The objection is not to the men but to the system. As a good citizen we protest against changing the location of our poor house.

BEHRING SEA DISPUTE.

The United States and England Arrange a Modus Vivendi.

Sealing to be Practically Stopped for a Year.

President Harrison issued a proclamation in which he announced that the United States and Great Britain have reached an agreement with respect to the closed season in Behring Sea.

He also addressed communications to the Secretaries of the Navy and Treasury Departments, in which he called their attention to the modus vivendi adopted. The Secretary of the Treasury will send instructions immediately to the revenue cutters Bear, Corwin and Rush, and the Secretary of the Navy will communicate with the commanders of the cruisers at the San Francisco rendezvous, where the British men-of-war will meet them.

The provisions of the modus vivendi which is announced to be for the purpose of preventing irritating differences, and to promote the friendly settlement of the claims of the two Governments in the Behring Sea, is as follows:

Whereas, An agreement for a modus vivendi between the Government of the United States and the Government of Her Britannic Majesty in relation to the fur seal fisheries in Behring Sea was concluded on the 15th day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, word for word as follows:

Agreement between the Government of the United States and the Government of Her Britannic Majesty for a modus vivendi in relation to the fur seal fisheries in Behring Sea.

For the purpose of avoiding irritating differences and with a view to promote the friendly settlement of the questions pending between the two Governments touching their respective rights in Behring Sea, and for the preservation of the seal species, the following agreement is made without prejudice to the rights or claims of either party:

(1) Her Majesty's Government will prohibit until May next seal-killing in that part of Behring Sea lying eastward of the line of demarcation described in Article No. 1 of the Treaty of 1867 between the United States and Russia, and will promptly use its best efforts to insure the observance of this prohibition by British subjects and vessels.

(2) That the United States Government will prohibit seal-killing for the same period in the same part of Behring Sea and on the shores and islands thereof, the property of the United States (an excess of 7,000 to be taken on the islands for the subsistence and care of the natives), and will promptly use its best efforts to insure the observance of this prohibition by United States citizens and vessels.

(3) Every vessel or person offending against this prohibition in the said waters of Behring Sea outside of the ordinary territorial limits of the United States may be seized and detained by the Naval or other duly commissioned officers of either of the high contracting parties, but they shall be handed over as soon as practicable to the authorities of the nation to which they respectively belong, who shall alone have jurisdiction to try the offence and impose the penalties for the same. The witnesses and proofs necessary to establish the offence shall also be sent with them.

(4) In order to facilitate such proper inquiries as Her Majesty's Government may desire to make, with the view to the prosecution of the case of that Government before arbitrators, and in expectation that an agreement for arbitration may be arrived at, it is agreed that suitable persons designated by Great Britain will be permitted at any time, upon application, to visit or to remain upon the seal islands during the present sealing season for that purpose.

Signed and sealed in duplicate at Washington this fifteenth day of June, 1891, on behalf of their respective Governments, by William F. Wharton, Acting Secretary of State of the United States, and Sir Julian Pauncefote, G. C. M. G., K. C. B., H. B. M., Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.

WILLIAM F. WHARTON (seal).
JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE (seal).

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, have caused the said agreement to be made public to the end that the same and every part thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States of America and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this fifteenth day of June, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, and of the independence of the United States the One hundred and fifteenth.

(Seal). BENJ. HARRISON.

By the President,
WILLIAM F. WHARTON, Acting Secretary of State.

The Behring Sea correspondence was made public by the Department of State late afternoon. The correspondence begins with a letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote in reply to one from Secretary Blaine, dated May 4. In Sir Julian's letter one of the stipulations was that the proposed agreement should not take effect unless Russia gave her consent.

In reply to this it was urged that such a delay would thwart the purposes intended, as by the time Russia's consent would be obtained it would be too late. It was also contended that Russia never claimed any rights in the part of the sea under discussion.

Salisbury then raised the point that Russia's consent be obtained. He expressed some doubt as to whether this Government would limit the catch to 7500 seals. Acting Secretary Wharton then wrote that Lord Salisbury would surely not question the good faith of the Government in limiting the catch, and agreed that Great Britain could send a representative to the Islands to secure evidence by which to properly present her case.

A number of other proposals and counter-proposals followed, and finally the modus vivendi as above was agreed upon by representatives of both Governments.

FIFTEEN BEHEADED.

One Executioner Does the Work Before a Big Crowd.

The China steamer which arrived at San Francisco, Cal., a few days ago, brought details of the beheading of fifteen Chinese at Kowoloon, opposite Hong Kong.

Among the victims were three leaders of the pirates who looted the steamer Namoa five months ago, killed the Captain and mate, and secured $30,000 in coin and goods.

A great crowd witnessed the spectacle, which was made more repulsive by the cynical jesting of the chief pirate. All the prisoners had their hands tied behind them.

The chief executioner and two assistants thrust their keen swords into the sand and amused themselves chaffing the police. The pirates were among the first lot of prisoners who arrived, and a howl of execration from the crowd greeted their appearance. "You," said the chief executioner, laying his hands on the shoulder of a tall, thin man, with keen, piercing eyes. "We'll begin with you."

"All right," responded the pirate leader, "I'm number one." He had been swearing in English and Chinese, one of the Chinese officers said, on the way to the execution ground.

He was placed at one end of a square, and all the others knelt in line with him. A few seconds sufficed to put them in order, and then the slaughter began. Lai Ateat, the pirate leader, kept looking around at the executioner, while that worthy examined his sword and while he held his long, thin neck outstretched, he continued to speak as if he wished the spectators to know he was not afraid.

"You may kill me now," he said, "but I'll revive again."

"Now, don't move," said the executioner, as he pulled the pirate's pigtail out of the way of the sword.

The kneeling man said something about everybody having his own luck, and as he said it the sword came down and he was no more.

The others, most miserable-looking wretches, shud dered and gave one unwilling look around. They had not long to wait, for the brawny executioner was getting through his work with great celerity prefacing each stroke with the warning, "Don't move," and accompanying each blow with a vigorous utterance of a Chinese expression, which might be rendered into English as "Done for."

When he came to the pirate who had planned the expedition to seize the steamer, he saw this fellow had lost his nerve. He swore roughly at him, but the victim was so nervous that his head moved.

The heavy sword fell on the shoulders, and the head did not roll off. His legs moved convulsively till the executioner, after chopping off the heads of the others, returned and dispatched him. The whole bloody work only occupied a few minutes.

AT present 2000 horses are in training in the United States and ready to race at an hour's notice, and over twice that number are not quite up to racing trim.

A TOWN IN ASHES.

Seabright, N. J., Visited by a Disastrous Fire.

Over 400 Houses Burned, Causing a Loss of $300,000.

Seabright, N. J., a summer resort near Long Branch, was almost entirely burned down.

The fire originated in the livery stables of J. A. Buckalew, on River street, at 4:45 o'clock in the afternoon, and an hour later every building in the business portion of the place was on fire.

The flames spread with such rapidity that the one fire company at Seabright was almost helpless, and before fire companies could be summoned from Red Bank, Long Branch, West End, Elberon and other adjacent towns the entire business portion of the city was ablaze.

Hundreds of families were driven into the streets and are homeless. The only buildings that escaped the disastrous flames were the Octagon, Peninsula and Pannacia hotels and the Seabright Inn. Everything else is in ruins.

The Octagon cottages were totally destroyed and it was only by the shifting of the wind that the Octagon Hotel was saved. Among the business houses destroyed were Knapp & West, Rud's drug store, Postoffice, Seabright M. E. Church and parsonage, Seabright Sentinel building, Couser's feed establishment, S. Levy's clothing store, the Garfield Hotel, Cloughley & Son's lumber yard, Seabright Public School, J. R. Minugh's tenement row, Peter Poppinga's Riverside Hotel, M. Garting's residence, Cook & Jacques's fruit store, Frank Martin's butcher store, Frank Heidel's bakery, the water works, R. Biber's jewelry store, New York and New Jersey Telephone Exchange, Dr. J. J. Reed's brick building, Charles Reese's Hotel Irwin, Nesbit's pumbing establishment, Charles Desch's barber shop, the Seabright fisheries, George Elliott's mammoth feed establishment, and a hundred or more small dwelling houses on the Shrewsbury River.

The loss will be fully $300,000. From Seabright to Low Moor Ocean avenue presents a disheartening scene. The wealthy have generously given shelter to about fifty destitute families, and as many more are bemoaning their loss on the lawns.

The scene was a most affecting one. The streets were filled with heart-broken mothers and fathers, who had been burned out of house and home.

The conflagration was seen hundreds of miles from Seabright. A relief corps has been organized by Colonel C. N. V. Wilson, and men are working earnestly to alleivate the sufferers. Fire engines were placed on all sides of the devastated city. Several head of cattle were burned.

The season at Seabright opened Saturday, and the damaging conflagration means a loss of a million of dollars' worth of business. When the fire was discovered the wind was blowing a gale from the west. Had it not been for this the city might have been saved. Proprietor Buckalew believes that the fire originated from the carelessness of a tramp who took shelter in his haymow and possibly set fire to the hay from the sparks of his pipe.

Pastor Owens, of the Asbury M. E. Church, lost everything after he thought he had escaped. His furniture was moved into the street, but before it could be carted away it was set on fire by a spark and burned.

One of the saddest features of the fire lies in the fact that but few of the dwellings were insured, the inmates being unable to carry any insurance. Upon the total loss of $300,000 not more than half is covered by insurance.

There was a rumor afloat that the fire had been started by a drunken stableman, who threw a lighted match in the hay in revenge for his fellow-workmen drenching him with a pail of water while he was asleep.

Owing to repairs being made to the water mains the water supply was utterly inadequate to the needs. The Seabright firemen lost most of their hose in the flames.

Many of the families burned out were those of poor fisherman, who have lost all they owned in the world. A mass-meeting was called to raise funds for their relief.

The burned section extends from the Shrewsbury River to the ocean, and to where the New Jersey Southern Railroad crosses Ocean avenue. As far as could be estimated over 400 buildings were destroyed.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

THE National Lithographers' Association has decided to make an extensive exhibit of lithography at the Exposition.

THE visitor to the Exposition will have an opportunity of learning among other things, just how a first-rate postoffice is managed. A working model of such an office will be a part of the U. S. Government exhibit.

AN international Exposition regatta is talked of as one of the attractions of the World's Fair. It is believed that the great oarsmen of the world can easily be induced to participate in such an event, and negotiations to that end have already been begun by interested parties.

COLONEL MUSGRAVE, who was in charge of the exhibit made by the Island of St. Vincent at the Jamaica Exposition, will bring to Chicago a group of Carib Indians, who are descendents of the natives discovered by Columbus. These Indians will live on the grounds and pursue their industries, the chief of which is basket-making.

LIEUTENANT SAFFORD, special Exposition Commissioner to Peru, has secured a collection of Indian antiquities found in the graves of the tribes that inhabited the coast region of northern Peru before the conquest. The collection embraces specimens of pottery, copper instruments and various objects of ethnological interest.

AN emergency hospital will be built on the Exposition grounds at once. Dr. John E. Owens has been chosen medical director of the Exposition, and he will organize a medical bureau which will have charge of all cases of personal injury occurring in the lines of duty, and any other cases for which the Exposition company may, in a measure, be responsible.

ONE of the interesting features of the exhibit which will be made by the Interior Department of the Government will be that relating to the American Indians. One of the officials of that Department, in speaking of the matter, said: "We will have Sioux and Pueblos on the ground in their peculiar wigwams, making all the articles of merchandise that they now make. The Zunis, who are classed with the Pueblos, will make blankets, stone bottles and a peculiar kind of pottery, while the Navajoes will weave blankets so firm that they will hold water. The peculiar huts of the Pueblos, which are entered from the roof, will also be shown."

CONTRACTS for the erection of the World's Fair buildings are now being let at the rate of about one a week. Chief of Construction Burnham says that there is no good reason why the buildings should not all be completed by July 1, 1892. Contractors are put under heavy bonds to finish their work within a specified time. The first building contracted for must be completed by December 31 of this year. The grounds are to be kept lighted by electricity at night, so that the contractors, if they chose or if they find it necessary, can work three gangs of men, eight hours each.

PLANS for the new life-saving station, which will be a part of the U. S. Government's exhibit at the World's Columbian Exposition, have been completed. The building will be eighty-four by forty-five feet in dimensions, three stories high, and will have wide verandas on three sides. The first floor is arranged for offices, and the upper portion for the living apartments of the keeper and crew. At the rear is the boat house for the life-boats. A pavilion fifty by 100 feet will be put up for life-saving apparatus. It is thought probable that the Government will allow the station to remain permanently at Jackson Park.

MURDEROUS PIRATES.

They Kill Six Russian Soldiers On Batoum.

A boat containing five Russian soldiers met off Batoum a strange boat manned by twelve pirates. The officer in command of the soldiers ordered the pirates to stop and allow the soldiers' boat to run alongside of them. The pirates answered by firing a volley from their rifles at the soldiers, killing four of them. The pirates then escaped, and the two surviving soldiers pulled ashore and gave the alarm. A boat manned by four soldiers then went in pursuit of the pirates and managed to overhaul them. Again the pirates fired, killing two and wounding the two remaining of the four Russian troopers sent in pursuit of their boat.

The wounded Russians managed to pull ashore and gave an account of their experiences. The result was that a third boat, this time better manned, was sent after the pirates. The latter made good their escape. A Russian gunboat has been sent in pursuit.

DOWN THE GRADE.

Brakemen Lose Control of Their Train, and Loss of Life Results.

While coming down the Alleghany Mountains from Lloydsville, Penn., to Bellwood, on the Pennsylvania and Northwestern Railroad, about midnight a heavy coal train got beyond the control of the trainmen, and, dashing down the grade, the heaviest in America east of the Rocky Mountains, was piled up and smashed into kindling wood at a curve about three miles north of Bellwood.

The engine and twenty-five cars lay piled up in a mass of broken wood and twisted iron at the bottom of the ravine, and among the debris were the bodies of the conductor, engineer and one brakeman, with almost all semblance to humanity crushed out of them. The other train hands escaped with their lives, but all were more or less injured. The accident is supposed to have been caused by wet rails and the air brakes refusing to work properly.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

THE heavy batting continues.

OLD Joe Hornung is Buffalo's pet player.

THE Detroit Baseball Club has been disbanded.

DAVIS, of Cleveland, was the first League player to make fifty hits.

THE Boston League infield is playing a particulary brilliant game.

DENNY'S first game with the Cleveland Club was marked by a victory.

THE New York Club won ten straight games before suffering a defeat.

STIVETTS, of St. Louis, is one of the best batting pitchers in the profession.

THE Washington Club has twenty-five men under contract thus far this season.

BIERBAUER, of the Pittsburhs, has sprained his ankle and can't play for weeks.

PITCHER KILROY, of the Cincinnati Association, is laid up for the season with a lame arm.

GORE is doing remarkable work for New York in fielding, batting and base-running.

THE New Yorks made only five errors in the Cleveland series of four games. Quite a record.

IF Rusie, of the New York's, had judgment in proportion to his speed he would be simply invincible.

NASH, of the Boston League Club, can beat any man in the country throwing underhand from third base.

PITCHER RHINES, of the Cincinnati League, is gradually recovering the tremendous speed he showed last season.

IT is claimed that McPhee, of the Cincinnati League, handles a ball in a double play as fast, if not faster, than any second baseman.

PARTISANS of Pitcher Galvin, of Pittsburg, are making invidious comparisons. They say he gets $85 a game and wins them, while "Silver" King gets about $130 and loses 'em.

JOHN WARD, of Brooklyn, was received with ovations wherever he appeared in the West. He and Kelly, of the Cincinnati Association, are the most popular players on the diamond.

BOWMAN, the University of Pennsylvania pitcher, who was tried by the Philadelphia leaguers last season, has won forty-one games from college teams in his career without losing one.

THERE are three runners with the Chicago team on whom it is almost impossible to make a double play, no matter how hard they hit the ball to the infielders. They are Cooney, Wilmot and Carroll.

IT is rarely a catcher is seen who can mystify an umpire as effectually as Harrington, of the Cincinnati League. He is up to all the tricks of his position, and his alertness in "pulling a ball down" caused the umpire to call many a ball a strike when it should be a ball.

"POET PETE," "Lyric Peter," "Major Pietro," "Old Horse Pete," "Kangaroo Pete," "Old Pete," "Pete, the ex-Colonel," "Hard-Headed Pete," and "Peter, He of the Red Eye," are a few of the names by which Browning, of Pittsburg, is known to his admirers on the ball field.

McKINLEY NOMINATED.

Ohio Republicans Select Him for Their Standard Bearer.

Ex-Congressman William McKinley, Jr., was nominated for Governor of Ohio by acclamation by the State Republican Convention at Columbus. His name was presented by ex-Governor Foraker.

It was the second day of the convention and most of the noted Republicans of the State were present. Prayer opened the proceedings and then the report of the Committee on Credentials was presented.

Amid cheers General Asa Bushnell, of Clark County, was chosen Permanent Chairman, and E. J. Kessinger, of Athens, Permanent Secretary.

Chairman Bushnell made a brief address, and declared nominations in order. In an instant ex-Governor Foraker was upon his feet.

Cheers came from every throat in the vast audience, and then, in a brief speech, the ex-Governor placed the name of Major McKinley in nomination.

Colonel Harlan, a colored politician, seconded the nomination in the name of 30,000 colored voters, and then with three cheers Major McKinley was made the choice of the Convention by acclamation.

He was quickly escorted to the hall by a committee, and in a brief speech expressed his thanks for the nomination.

Andrew L. Harris, of Preble County, was then nominated for Lieutenant-Governor; Ebenezra W. Poe, of Wood County, was nominated for Auditor and W. T. Cope, of Cleveland, was nominated for State Treasurer.

The platform adopted reaffirms the devotion of the party to the doctrine of protection, recognizes the McKinley bill as the ablest expression of that principle, and pledges support to it, "always having in view its improvement as changed conditions or experience may require."

SOME startling disclosures in relation to the seemingly endless litigations over A. T. Stewart's millions are promised in relation to the suit brought by the Irish claimants. Cats and Dogs in Human Attire.

The latest fad is the costuming of household pets. This comes from Paris, where there is a shop for the sale of feline and canine wardrobes. A little dog caused a sensation on Fifth avenue, New York City, a few days ago. He seemed to be much ashamed of himself, and when he saw any of his kind he would give an explanatory whine and shake himself, as if to say that it was not his fault if he looked like an idiot. No wonder he was unhappy, for he was arrayed in a sailor suit of blue flannel, with a wide sailor collar, embroidered with anchors, and a white tie. A saucy little sailor hat contributed further to his misery. In wet weather this delicate pet was enveloped in a gossamer, and when his mistress gives receptions he appears in a tea gown of rose-colored silk, with long train and flowing angel sleeves.

Another young girl attires her pet cat—a white Angora—in a white china silk cloak and a pink silk bonnet tied with dainty ribbons under its comical whiskers. More sane lovers of animals decorate their darlings with collars of gold, silver or leather, and others make wide neck frills of china silk plaited in tiny accordion folds, and these are decidedly pretty and becoming, especially to dignified cats and frolicsome kittens. —Chicago News.

Something of Texas's Bigness.

"I live in the greatest State in the Union," said Richard M. Anderson, of San Antonio, Texas, at the Metropolitan Hotel in New York City, "and from what I know of her resources I think her exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago will astonish the people of the United States. The largest wheat farm in this country outside of California is situated in the Panhandle of Texas, or what is known as West Texas. It comprises 10,000 acres on the railroad, ten miles east of Colorado, and is owned by a company of some of the best known capitalists of Dallas, Fort Worth and Colorado. This immense tract of land lies high and almost level, while the soil is rich and deep, with hardly any timber. The far
